Showflat Interior Design Project

Centered around “Quality Living & Human-centric Adaptation & Functional Integration & Scenario Versatility”, this project exemplifies China Overseas Grand Oceans' commitment to its human-centric development philosophy.

Redefining Standards for Quality Living

With quality as its foundation, this project utilizes premium materials, such as natural stone and bronze stainless steel, complemented by soothing palettes and refined craftsmanship to render a functional, human-centric living space that embodies the project's vision of elevated living.

Pioneering “Holistic Family Portrait” Customization Strategy

This project introduces a three-dimensional logic— “Life Portrait, Functional Needs, Soft Furnishings Execution”. It offers personalized spaces tailored to different family members, fulfilling the core vision of “Soft Furnishings Adapt to Life, Human-Centric Design Empowers Living”.

Core Concept of Human-Centric Adaptation

Rooted in human-centric adaptation, this project responds to the diverse needs of a three-member family, including provisions for visiting grandparents. Spatial layouts are well-organized according to family members' ages, professions, and interests, thus hugely improving the living experience.

Functional Integration

Through innovative designs, this 143-square-meter project dissolves traditional functional boundaries to maximize space efficiency. It achieves “Functional Integration” and “Furniture Versatility”, effortlessly adapting to the dynamic needs of a high-end family.

Where Utility Meets Quality

Guided by the principle of "Space Optimization", this project leverages modular furnishings and flexible layouts to unlock the full potential of each room through seamless multi-scenario transitions. The living room, for example, seamlessly shifts from social gatherings to an immersive reading retreat—satisfying the high-end family's desire for both versatility and a sense of ceremony.
